

Volunteering while rooting on their hometown team.

What could be better than rooting on your favorite sports team while raising money for charity? The answer would be nothing as a few Northwood Realty Services real estate agents found out. As part of a fundraising effort, the agents gave up a few hours of their time for free to volunteer to work security at a home Pittsburgh Steelers football game.

In return, Landmark, an event staffing company, would donate the workers "wage" to the Charitable Foundation. Volunteers had a two hour training session before the first game, and then they were ready to go! So far, we have had 15 volunteers to work a home game, and the interest is still building on how to participate.

